Description
A game with fantastic learning potential. A playing field is chosen on which a number of "sins" (five to seven people) will be placed, at one end of the field stands "Jesus" and at the other end a blindfolded volunteer.
The idea of the game is for the volunteer to reach Jesus, guided only by his voice, without touching any of the sins. The sins can take any position they like to make the volunteer's progress as difficult as possible. It can alternate moments of silence, when Jesus only speaks, giving him directions, with moments when all the sins shout and give the volunteer all sorts of false information.
The volunteer will have to be very careful to distinguish Jesus' voice. One idea (which is also a great teachable moment), would be for "Jesus" to take the person in his arms the moment he is too stuck in the middle of "sins."

Materials

Possibly, plaques with the name of the sin, hung around the neck of the volunteers.
