And you are....

Materials: a blanket/tarpaulin/piece of fabric

Participants are divided into 2 teams (5–20 children). Before that, everyone goes around introducing themselves, once or twice.

Two leaders stand between the two teams, holding the blanket up so that the two teams cannot see each other. The rule is that, one at a time, the teams designate a representative to stand in front of or behind the blanket. After counting to 3, the leaders lower the blanket so the two can see each other. The first one to say the other's name wins, and the loser switches to the opposing team. After a few rounds, the blanket is lowered without warning. The team with the most children at the end wins.
