Whose name is in demand?

A great game to get to know each other

Game instructions

This game requires somewhat more intensive preparation on the part of the staff and can only be played on occasions where it is known who will be attending (e.g. camps where registration is done in writing in advance). A code language is used for the names in the group: A Bible verse is given for each letter. The first letter of the verse applies in each case (please bring exactly the same edition of the Bible for everyone). The young people are divided into two to three groups. The code language for a name is shown on the wall on a cardboard or with an overhead projector. Whoever guesses the name of the code language first gets a point. The next name is then sought. For groups in which the youngsters are older, it is advisable to play with surnames; for very "young" groups, not all letters may be coded.
